RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research interests are general areas of mass communication with an extensive focus on online misinformation, information processing, digital discourse in politics and public relations, and health communication. I use traditional qualitative and quantitative methods as well as more sophisticated computational and psycho-physiological methods. Moreover, I am interested in conducting inter-disciplinary research in collaboration with domain experts from computer science, public health, and marketing.

EDUCATION

2020 – Present	University of South Carolina, Columbia (UofSC) May 2023 (Expected Graduation)	PH.D. IN MASS COMMUNICATION
	My doctoral dissertation is focused on assessing the interventional impact of different cues on how individuals process (mis)information on social media. I use mixed methods approach to understand how online spread of misinformation can be countered through such cues used by the mainstream social media platforms, subsequently leading to improvement and personalization of platforms' user-interfaces. Advisor: Dr. Sei-Hill Kim
2018 – 2020	Hacettepe University, Ankara (HU)	M.A. IN COMMUNICATION SCIENCES
2011 – 2015	University of the Punjab, Lahore (PU)	B.S. IN COMMUNICATION STUDIES
